

Planning Commission Recommends Plan Go to City Council for Hearing and Adoption

Thursday, April 14, 2005 - The City of Evansville Planning Commission hosted an open house at City Hall this evening for residents to learn more about the Smart Growth Comprehensive Plan and get their questions answered. Amy Emery of OMNNI Associates gave a presentation highlighting the nine required plan elements, important plan recommendations, central themes, and recommended strategies for the future.

During the discussion, residents commended the plan for its thoroughness and complimented the recommended themes and strategies. Some participants asked for clarification about areas of the Future Land Use Map and representatives from the neighboring Town of Union outlined their ideas for improving future coordination with the City and implementation of the plan.

Following the open house, the Planning Commission unanimously passed a motion to recommend the Plan move forward to City Council for a hearing and adoption.

A copy of the plan will remain available for public review at City Hall in the Library and on this project web page. Once a public hearing date is set, it too will be posted on this project web page.
